Performance Workshop

approaching archetypes – introduction

When a performer leaves the comfort zone and enters the empty space, he/she faces the challenge of risking to lose the known self and embracing the potential transformation. In the workshop we will cross the threshold into the unknown, as we improvise with movement, dance, sound and language. In varying settings such as alone, in pairs and groups, we go through simple tasks and thereby invite intensive personal and artistic experiences. The journey will be further shaped by archetypal themes and motives, which let us tell the story beyond the personal and (re)discover the source for force, creativity, meaning and freedom.

This workshop serves as the introductory course for the performative research project "approaching archetypes" and can be taken as single workshop. Open for all levels. Please bring a blanket and comfortable training clothes.
